

Empowering communities and citizens in heritage research

This session, organized by the Citizen Heritage project, wanted to entice an interactive discussion with the audience, focused on understanding the approach methodologies, the various roles and challenges of technology in enabling an inclusive engagement with cultural collections that empowers citizens and community representative organizations in the reappropriation of their heritage. In particular we focused on methods for Citizen Science in this regard.

Wednesday 2nd February h. 9-10.30.

The session was supported by the use of an interactive environment based on a MIRO Board. View the Citizen Heritage MIRO board HERE.

The Dream Team session will serve as a point of departure for a joint publication in which contributors will be duly credited.

The Miro board is titled 'ECQI2022'. It features several pinned notes and images. One note discusses 'Going beyond data into emotion' and 'A dynamic approach to heritage'. Another note is about 'Cultures in motion' and how they relate to the world. A third note is 'Free Wilson Mixing the Musicians'. There are also images of people and a landscape. The board has a sidebar with various tools and a timeline at the bottom.
