

Italy is culture: cultural institutes for economic development

On 25-26 September, the national conference 'Italy is Culture' organised by AICI (Association of Italian Cultural Institutions) was held in Turin, at Einaudi Campus. The event - where Dario Franceschini, Minister for Heritage and Cultural and Tourism Activities, and representatives from the European Commission and from important Italian Institutions intervened - was part of a series of initiatives taking place on occasion of the Italian Presidency of EU and followed 23-24 September's assembly of Europe's Cultural Ministries hosted by Turin's Venaria Realm.

The conference aimed to give a strong signal about the potential of Italian culture and cultural institutions, which are undergoing a positive process of transformation and renewal: Italian culture has a strong vocation to social and technological innovation, to communicational experimentation, to internationalisation. Objectives to be achieved through synergic and multidisciplinary cooperation between the public and private sector for the benefit of Italian economic development.

Italy is culture presented data and concrete proposals that will merge into a Charter of Culture for European Renaissance, baseline for the growth and identity preservation of Europe.
