

Paleography And Diplomatics On The Digital Humanities Route: Pathways And Proposals

Sponsored by CIDEHUS - University of Évora (Portugal), in partnership with the Centro de História - University of Lisbon (Portugal), this event will pose questions and discuss hypotheses for the work of digital humanities in history:

What past and what future?

What are the paths for palaeography and diplomatics and the other sciences that allow historians' work to continue?

Are we dealing with new practices or new methods of addressing sources and writings?

To what extent is preservation possible without evading historical documents?

How can computer programming create tools for historians and archives?

Submission of proposals for paper is open until 28th March 2021.

Preliminary programme is online at the official website at <http://www.pdcongress.uevora.pt/en>

Admission to the event is free with a required registry.
