This page was exported from - Digital meets Culture
Export date: Mon Nov 16 14:09:50 2026 / +0000 GMT

Registrations open for the OpenLab.brussels conference 'Creating Knowledge through Participatory Research'

Openlab.brussels

On November 13th and 14th, OpenLab.brussels is hosting the international conference "Creating Knowledge through Participatory Research" in Brussels.

The OpenLab.brussels is a joint venture of ULB-VUB]dedicated to participatory research. It aims to mobilize our academic community and public or private stakeholders willing to collaborate on participatory research projects in Brussels.
Bringing together researchers and practitioners engaged in participatory research, this event will explore how participatory research empowers diverse stakeholders to actively contribute to various stages of the research process as co-researchers. Beyond expanding research capacity and data collection, this approach fosters more inclusive, sustainable, and socially relevant research outcomes.
Join for dynamic workshops and panel discussions that will address the challenges of participatory research, while showcasing innovative projects from Brussels and across Europe.
The preliminary program is now available

Interested in attending? You can secure your spot by registering here

Participation is free, but registration is required.

This event is organized with the support of CIVIS and the FWB.