

REMOTE ISTANBUL, a new theatrical interactive performance

Rimini Protokoll

Focusing on contemporary performance arts across multiple genres, Kundura Stage is an alternative platform for cutting edge theatre productions. It marks the second stage in the redevelopment of Beykoz Kundura as a multipurpose arts venue and cultural destination in Istanbul.

The inaugural season launches with Rimini Protokoll's 'Remote Istanbul' - a theatrical audiovisual journey in the streets of Istanbul. The interactive and immersive experience sees a small group of audience members set off into the heart of Istanbul with headphones.

Guided by a synthetic voice, they are asked to watch each other and make individual decisions whilst always remaining as part of a group.

Throughout the performance binaural recordings and film scores provide a soundtrack for the urban landscape. The journey through the city feels more and more like a collective film. The audience is transformed into active participants in the performance, exploring the influence of artificial intelligence, big data and our own predictability.

Since its first premiere in Berlin in 2013, 'Remote X' (as it is generically known), has traveled to more than 50 cities including Lisbon, Madrid, Moscow, New York, São Paulo, St. Petersburg and more.

S. Buse Yıldırım, Managing Artistic Director at Beykoz Kundura said:

'We are delighted to collaborate with Rimini Protokoll, cult pioneers of documentary theatre, and are very glad to present their Remote X performance in Istanbul, which offers a unique audio-visual experience of city-making through theatre and technology. We aim to centralise theatre of documentary/reality into our curation policy by hoping to collaborate for multiple upcoming projects from this genre. Our mission is to present cutting edge, innovative productions in Istanbul and we look forward to witnessing the gradual return of its vibrant cultural scene.?
