

Rijksmuseum launches Collectie Online - the new online collections platform

img. courtesy of Rijksmuseum's website

After four years of planning, considering, building, refining, testing, releasing, reconsidering, fretting, cropping, finetuning and re-cropping, Rijksmuseum launched Collectie Online, the successor to the Rijksmuseum's ground-breaking Rijksstudio collections platform.

Here are some of the possibilities the platform offers:

Allow the viewer to look at zoomable high versions of all the objects the museum's allowed to publish

Download all the images in high resolution for free

Allow the viewer to make collection of their favourite objects

Search through all the artworks, publications and user sets simultaneously

Instant access to museum stories, catalogues and recommended works for further exploration

Linked data to build up fine-tuned search queries to get at just the objects needed

Browse through the collection with thousands of pages highlighting objects fitting that category

Carefully curated pages to help the viewer find their way in the collection

Offer questions to the viewer and suggest them artworks that match your mood, vibe, or style

The viewer can decide what works should hang in the Gallery of Honour

Comparative study of the works in the collection

Visit and start browsing at: <https://www.rijksmuseum.nl/en/collection>